

OLC 401- Chapter 3

3.1 Everyday Text

Lesson 1- Selecting Relevant Data

Everyday text often contains relevant data, or information you need, to keep your life running smoothly. Once you select the information you need from an everyday text, you're in a better position to make decisions.

Schedules are a common type of everyday text. Like tables, they contain a great deal of data organized in a logical and easy to use format. To find relevant data on a schedule, read the headings for the rows and columns. Make sure you know what they stand for. Then read down the columns and across the rows to find the information you need.

Tips for Success

- ➔ Read titles and headings carefully
- ➔ Look for specific pieces of information in the text that will answer the question
- ➔ Combine different pieces of information in a text to choose the correct answer

Study this schedule. Then use the data in the schedule to answer the question.
